

WHY ARE MILITARY SERVICE MEMBERS AT RISK FOR RHABDOMYOLYSIS

Engage in intense physical training, often exceeding normal limits

Experience high levels of physical stress and fatigue during operations.

Face extreme environmental conditions, such as heat and humidity.

May have inadequate hydration during rigorous activities.

Often perform repetitive, high-impact exercises that strain muscles.

Limited recovery time between training sessions can lead to muscle breakdown.